UPT - Portucalense University	https://www.educaedu.com.pt/licenciatura-em-turismo-licenciatura-30968.html	Bachelor's Degree in Tourism	3 years	The Bachelor's Degree in Tourism aims to provide up-to-date training that is aligned with the dynamics of Tourism. The course structure combines curricular units required for multidisciplinary training with optional units that allow students to develop their own study plan. Internship modules I and II put students in contact with the real world of work and with practical problems. This connection is reinforced in the Promotion and Development of Tourist Destinations and Innovation and Development of Tourist Products units, which develop the ability to innovate in terms of tourism offerings. Development and Operation of Tourist Projects should develop skills in planning and development analysis in Tourism and in project construction and operation. Why choose this course? The growing importance of the tourism sector in economic terms and in employability requires new training offerings capable of responding to these challenges. In this sense, this course is supported by prestigious partnerships, namely with TPNP. Furthermore, the course has a teaching staff with a strong connection to the "field": tourism companies and land administration. This results in a training dynamic with a practical and realistic character, which includes the possibility of some of the classes being taught in tourism "hot spots".

ESTT - School of Tourism and Hospitality	https://www.educaedu.com.pt/licenciatura-em-gestao-hoteleira-licenciatura-25451.html	Bachelor's Degree in Hotel Management	3 years	Through its theoretical and practical components, the Hotel Management course aims to meet specific training needs in the hotel, restaurant and catering industries. The degree in Hotel Management provides access to the Hotel Manager professional card, which allows the student to perform the following functions: hotel manager, accommodation manager, reception manager, food and beverage manager, service manager, sales and marketing manager, sales promoter, entertainment manager, among others. The completion of integrated internships throughout the course in national and foreign companies allows the student to come into contact with and apply professional knowledge that is extremely relevant for entering the job market. Recent developments in tourism and the hotel industry show that the demand for these professionals has increased in recent years, and the number of hotel establishments has grown considerably, as has the number of hotel managers registered with the Directorate-General for Tourism. ESTT - School of Tourism and Hospitality	https://www.educaedu.com.pt/licenciatura-em-turismo-e-lazer-licenciatura-25449.html	Bachelor's Degree in Tourism and Leisure	3 years	The Tourism and Leisure Course aims to prepare senior technical staff (undergraduate degree) for national tourism activity, in an economic sector where higher education is still lacking. The Course offers general training in foreign languages and Portuguese, development and planning, management and marketing, geography and history, mathematics and statistics, social sciences and law, and specific and practical training on the various activities and segments of tourism activity. The selected structure aims to prepare these senior technical staff to perform functions at technical and supervisory levels in various sectors of the complex tourism industry and regional and national public administration of tourism. This objective is therefore based on: providing solid training in the economic, socio-cultural and environmental fields, with a view to improving knowledge of how the tourism sector works and its importance for regional development and land use planning processes; enhancing technical, practical and applied knowledge, with a view to professional integration in the public and private sectors of tourism; to provide a solid foundation for regional (Serra da Estrela) and national knowledge of the territory, its resources and potential for tourism, within the framework of integrated and sustainable economic, social and environmental development. The Tourism and Leisure Course values the most appropriate training for the exercise of a professional activity in one of the various sectors of the tourism industry. The aim is to guarantee training that includes knowledge and expertise specific to tourism and leisure activities, in accordance with the graduate's profile. The study plan highlights the importance of the scientific areas of Tourism (36%) and Hotel Management (4%) and, also, the optional curricular units, for applying knowledge of traditional disciplines to the area of knowledge of Tourism, with a view to fostering a multidisciplinary vision of the tourism phenomenon. In particular, the Professional Practice curricular units stand out, for having an essentially applied nature.	Portuguese

UALG - University of Algarve	https://www.educaedu.com.pt/licenciatura-em-informacao-e-animacao-turistica-licenciatura-22903.html	Degree in Tourist Information and Entertainment (Portimão)	3 years	The course in Tourist Information and Entertainment is designed to train highly qualified graduates for a sector of activity that is undergoing significant expansion at national and international level and for which the supply of technicians with higher education is clearly insufficient. The aim is to train professionals who can meet the demand for human resources with core training in the areas of culture, entertainment, management and communication aimed at tourism companies and related sectors. The course values the practical and applied nature of the knowledge acquired, through study visits, the organisation of seminars and participation in national and regional events organised by the public and private sectors. The training provided provides students with the opportunity to come into contact with real-life situations experienced in the field of their future activity, particularly through agreements with public and private entities linked to the tourism sector.	Portugese
